Senate Committee to Report Immi gration Bill Unchanged Next Monday.

Discussion of Japanese exclusion broke out again in the House Committee on Immigration yesterday despite the effort of administration Democrats to head it off. The committee had under consideration the bill proposing to exclude Hindoos. Pacific Coast members brought up the question of Japanese exclusion and Roger o'Donnell, special agent of the Immigration Bureau, declared that Japanese are as active in seeking admission to the United States as Chinese and Hindoos.

issues, but with seventeen of the fortytempting such regulation through State laws, many of them greatly at variance one with the other, it is difficult to conceive a situation fraught with more complications than would arise if the power of regulation thus were multiplied. "If all the States should enact laws empowering their public utilities to reg-ulate the issues of the common carriers the complexities of the situation would be burdensome to the last degree."

Herbert Noble, of New York, filed with the Judichary Committee brief covering his criticisms of the pending bills. He argued that the decisions of the Supre Court in the trust cases have served to broaden, and have not narrowed, the meanings of the Sherman act.

With regard to the bill extending the scope of the Sherman act, Mr. Noble advanced the opinion that it might prove that the enactment of legislation forbidding too much would work greater harm than good.

George S. Franklin, attorney for the McCall Company, addressed the commit-tee on the rights of publishers to fix the selling price of their product. Doneisen Caffrey, of Louisiana, and Frank S. Trumbuil, chairman of the directors of the Chesapeake and Ohio, also testified.
